KITTENS

HARRIET R. GREENLAND

W E'VE a box of pretty kittens,
All as white as driven snow;
Their eyes as blue as heaven,
As they lie there in a row.

Mother says she cannot keep them.
"What on earth," I heard her say,
"Can I do with four wee kittens?"
I've thought, though, by the way,

When the mother isn't looking
We will take them down the street,
For our neighbors must want kittens,
And will surely think them sweet.

So the small white tiny babies,
With a ribbon on each one,
Were all taken down and left there,
For we thought it was great fun.

But a week has passed most quickly,
And I'm sure it is not far—
We will find out in a minute
Where those little kittens are.

Well, I found one in the bushes,
With a ribbon round its head.
I think it must be strangled,
For I'm very sure it's dead.

And the second was run over
As it tried to cross the street,
And I felt so awful sickish
As it lay there at my feet.

And the third the children played with
Till they tired it all the day,
And it's curled up in a corner
Just to hide itself away.

Then the fourth a lady rescued,
And it's sleeping fat and clean;
It's the only one that's happy
Of the four that I have seen.

Line-Breeding—Cross-Breeding

Which Produces Our Winners and Our Greatest Sires?

MRS. SHANNON D. SMITH

RECENTLY there appeared in the Review a most unqualified denouncement of in-breeding, the more surprising in that it came from one whose strain has hitherto stood as a shining example of the success of intelligent line-breeding, which is but systematic in-breeding. If we are to take this as a confession of mistake and failure where we have so long seen only assured success, it is a brave stand—indeed, braver than most of us would be capable of taking, at least in public; but I, for one, am not willing to accept such a verdict from the evidence on hand, and can but believe that a general conclusion has been jumped to from some one particularly bitter experience, never a safe thing to do in any scientific investigation.

It was asserted that half brothers and sisters, mother and son, father and daughter, should never be mated, as they would "produce deformities such as cleft palates, crooked legs, misplaced joints in tail, also heart trouble, brain trouble, fits, etc." Now, perhaps no one has used these same crosses to such an extent as I have in the last few years in my efforts to perfect chin and eye color in my brown tabbies, yet never once have any of these defects appeared as a result of such close crossing. I have had only one kinked tail in all the time I have bred cats, and that did not come from in-breeding, as neither parent was an in-bred cat, nor were they at all related to each other. This pair had for years given me big, sturdy kittens, but their last litter, when both were well over eleven years old, contained one tiny female, with two kinks in her tail. After this litter the old queen ceased breeding. This deformity had never appeared before in this line, and it has never appeared since in any of the descendents of this pair.

It is well known among poultry people that "cripples" very rarely appear in hatches made naturally from eggs set under hens, but eggs artificially incubated in machines very rarely fail to produce some cripples, the percentage depending on the skill of the operator of the machine. This is one of the most important problems of artificial incubation. So, while some of the deformities among our kittens may be inherited, most of them, I feel sure, are the result of the physical condition of the queens while carrying their kittens. I have never yet had a deformed kitten, or one born with its eyes open, that I have not been able to trace the trouble directly to the queen in every case. In my own experience I have found three causes for the last trouble—eyes open at birth; first, breeding from an immature female; second, from one that has suffered even a light attack of flu or some gastric fever either just before or just after mating, and third, from being carried overtime, which is generally due to one of the first two causes, though close confinement and extreme nervousness may also produce this result. Well do I remember a little cat I owned some years ago, a wretchedly nervous little thing, a prolific breeder and a persistent one, but she never gave me a normal litter, and she could not raise the kittens that looked normal. I finally bred her to the same male as before, and sent her to a friend, who kept her as a chum and house pet throughout her time, and the following year. She not only had three nice sturdy kittens, but she raised them beautifully. Later on she was returned to me, and though she had a big run to herself and every care in feeding, she went back to her old habit of feeble kits, deformities and open eyes. She was in no way an in-bred cat, nor was she ever bred to a related male. Her trouble lay, undoubtedly, in the fact that she was meant for a pet, and was unhappy as a kennel cat. From this it appears that we may get puny kittens and deformed ones from unrelated stock, so it is hardly fair to condemn a method because of something that might have happened from other causes. As a plain matter of fact, in-breeding, no matter how close, will not of itself produce anything from a strain that is not already there. It clears up and purifies characteristics already existing in a line, but it will not add a single new trait.

Neither can I endorse the statement that in-bred cats should never be mated twice to the same cat even when not related. On the contrary, if I had an in-bred queen that I knew had a latent weakness, but who produced good kittens by a male, unrelated or not, I should much prefer repeating the same mating to trying the unknown combination of a new male whose hidden characteristics might be just the ones to bring to light the lurking evil in the queen. By all manner of means stick to a good combination when you find one, they are rare enough as they are. The reason of the deformed kits produced from a repeat mating to any male is that those deformities are latent behind both lines. If deformities were always dominant all progeny from a deformed parent would show the trait, but fortunately, most of our cat deformities seem to be either recessive or at least dependent on some complement from the other line, and do not appear till those conditions are fulfilled, thus only some of them show the character, and these do not come at regularly spaced intervals. Often many litters will come beautifully free of taint, and then will come a gathering up of all the tags and rags of the strain. The remedy lies in destroying these rag-tags at birth to make sure that they, at least, shall not carry on the undesirable trait, but the normal progeny are not to be feared on the score of in-breeding alone, many of them will not have the character at all, and others will not produce it unless the other side supplies the necessary complement.

No cat possessing any deformity at birth should be raised; if destroyed at once there is never any question of future breeding; and assuredly if such cases escape detection they should be prohibited from breeding later on, and they should certainly be disqualified when found at the shows. If the rule for disqualifications was prominently displayed in every premium list, and also in the show room, there would not be the disappointment and dissatisfaction that now arises when such a specimen goes down before some discerning judge.

As for refusing registration to cats because of in-breeding, that will never be done; it would be a real calamity to the fancy if it were. Think of the great winners and sires the fancy would have lost through such a rule—Haughty Prince, Rajah Mack, Turk's Cap of Hyver. And when it comes to the silvers, it is appalling to think where the American fancy would have been to-day without such names as Sandalphon, Don Dai, Donsilverra, Fulmer Silver Lavender, Argent Bunny, Baby Splendour, Dawn O'Day; and the incomparable KING WINTER, probably the greatest, both as show cat and sire, that America has ever produced. All of these resulted from half brother and sister matings, and all, if not illustrious themselves, left famous progeny that have proved the worth of the breeding behind them. Mother to son and father to daughter bring out such names as Wahoo Punch, sire of Ch. Holden Silverkin, Sir Knight, and Lazarre II, who, when bred back to his maternal grand-dam, produced the lovely champion Virginia. Other grandparent to grandchild matings gave Romaldkirk Vice Admiral, Argent Marvelous and Argent Lustre. Uncle to niece and nephew to aunt have been favorite matings with the Argent Kennels, and have given us such names as Ch. Argent Splendour, Argent May Blossom, Argent Brilliant, Argent Fairy, who, when mated in turn to her uncle, gave Argent Silverhair, and Argent Glorious and Argent Fancy, cousins, who, when mated, produced Argent Glorioso. From this same cross we have also Arlington Biji, Ch. Erebus, Ch. The Conqueror, and Minuet, who when mated to her uncle, gave us Al Tarek. Two of these in-bred cats, mated together, Argent Splendour and Bouji, produced the good winner, Ch. Argent Dazzle. In the list of double cousins we find Ch. Silver King, Ch. Y Brenin Gwynne, Faust II, Argent Daisy, and many others, while the list of cousins of lesser degree grows too numerous to mention. But to list them as cousins, uncles, aunts, nieces, or nephews, tells but half the story. It is a matter to marvel over to find how closely interwoven are the pedigrees of most of our greatest winners and breeders. It would be more than a "puzzle for a Philadelphia lawyer" to define all the relationship lying behind The Viking, Silver Dyke, Argent Dazzle, Sans Souci, Peg O' My Heart, San Dawn, Holden Silver Light, or Ganymede. Surely, with all this weight of illustrious names to support it, we cannot class in-breeding as a crime, or close our stud books to those who have practised it with such success.

SUGGESTIONS AND THOUGHTS ON JUDGING

MARIE STOUT

(Concluded)

One more great tendency is to select a judge because he or she will judge without charging. This, too, should not be done. To the out-of-town exhibitor who risks the life of his stock, pays the high railroad and hotel bills, to say nothing of the expenses, entry fees, specials, decorations and extras, it is not fair to select a judge on the score of his or her services being offered free.

To the exhibitor nothing counts so much as the ability and fairness of the judge. Therefore, I have always said when asked the question, "Get the best judge you can afford, make a sacrifice, if necessary, to get one who is both fair and competent. Better save on something else than to save on that most important item." Competent judges earn their fee, no matter how large; those who know are all agreed on that point. Now, as to qualifications of a judge, I believe that the following list of items is of the utmost importance:

First of all, he or she must know cats by experience, and successful breeding of them is the greatest and best method to gain that experience. The judge must know colors; must know a tabby from a shaded cat, and a black from a smoke. The correct tint of a blue and a chinchilla, correct eye color, weight, etc. Of course, the body and head type included. A level head is another qualification in a judge not to be overlooked. To be able to judge the relative value as to one point against another is most important.

Last, but by no means least, two items of considerable importance are absolute sincerity as to judging the cat as a cat, and not who is who's cat. Then, last of all, the personal appearance of the judge. This is unimportant, perhaps, to some extent, but we want the best in the most important part of the show, and I am strong in saying that the judge is most important. Personal appearance is not fine apparel, but dignity of manner; not coldness, but proper dignity, a spirit of friendliness—yes, but not too much so—a spirit of helpfulness and patience which will bear with the novice breeder. Personally I prefer a judge who, in close competition, will make an audible statement as to the reason for the decision given. A few pleasant remarks as to quality of points of the cats competing is never amiss, and is of much help and interest to the novice exhibitor in particular. Many a breeder has been literally put on the map to stay by a favorable remark about a cat being judged.

I believe that the time has come for the associations to select competent breeders of good repute as to honesty, and to grant these the necessary licenses to judge.

EAR CANKER CURE

Swab out the ear thoroughly with listerine, one part to three parts of water; dry thoroughly. It cured my cat, and it ought to cure others.

Virginie dq Verdugo a beautifully marked silver tabby and undefeated in California shows, died recently. She left a lovely little daughter that promises to be as good looking as her mother.

Mimi Flag, owned by Miss H. E. Brown, of New York, completed her championship last Winter. Owing to a former show report not being sent to Mrs. West in good shape, Mimi did not have credit for all of her wins before.

Mrs. Palmer sent Mrs. J. A. Freeman a very promising young male, Pansonia Carmine Rajshah II, because of her loss in Rajshah I, who died two days after the Hamilton Show.

Mrs. A. G. Johnson, of Cleveland, Ohio, had a nice new cattery built with gas to heat it and will use a garage later and have electric light and water and outside runs with covered roof and cement floor.

Her Blue Jack of Crickmere was best cat in the Detroit show and is also now a champion.

The show just given by the British Columbia Cat Club (registered) was the largest and most interesting cat show ever held by the Vancouver Exhibition Association. It was a four point A. C. A. show and there were so many new cats that the judging was very interesting.

Dr. Libbie W. Ashcroft is making an extended trip up the coast to Alaska, through Canada to Montreal, slipping down to Chicago on the way, then to New York, (where your editor hopes to meet her) and from New York to New Orleans by boat on the homeward way.

Mrs. J. A. Freeman, of Hamilton, Canada, writes: "I feel that I have just cause for pride in my pets," (The record in Mrs. Freeman's advertisement shows this) "I made some nice sales through the show, too. Pansonia Lord Hamilton, blue male a year old, goes as a stud to Dr. J. A. McInnis, Mayor of Timmins, Ontario. Pansonia Bluebell, blue female kitten, goes to Mr. W. J. Scott, of Toronto. Pansonia Blue Tom, a kitten, goes to Miss M. E. Pattinson, Preston, Ontario. Pansonia Chin Chin, to Miss Freeman, Hamilton, Ontario, and Pansonia Brown Betty, tortoiseshell kitten to another Hamilton purchaser.

KEYSTONE STATE CAT CLUB

On Thursday, September 13th, the first meeting of the season, of the Keystone State Cat Club was held, a good attendance encouraging the members.

Splendid report is made of progress toward the success of the Annual Cat Show to be held by the Cat Club, January 11 and 12, 1924. For this show, the North Gardens of the Hotel Bellvue-Stratford have been secured and cups, medals and specials are coming in in interesting numbers.

Mrs. Charles L. Brown, President of the Club, has been elected show manager. Mrs. R. V. Boyer and Mrs. R. L. Nevitt, Assistant Show Managers; Mrs. Gertrude E. Taylor, Judge and Mrs. L. T. Warrington, Secretary. The following have been elected chairmen of the various committees, Mrs. Cowgill, Mrs. Pickel, Mrs. McKennon, Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. Kierner, Mrs. Grosset, Mrs. Warfel, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Kramm, Mrs. Boyer, Mrs. Nevitt and Captain Kramm.

Many interesting features will be introduced and a brilliant success seems assured according to the reports of the committees. This is an ideal place for a cat show—perfect light, real ventilation and artistic appointments, all of which are the essentials for the comfort and display of our lovely cats.

BRITISH COLUMBIA CAT CLUB

Following the recent exhibition, the home of Mrs. F. J. Kadlec, Lynn Creek, was the scene of a pleasant gathering given in honor of the judge of the Cat Exhibit, Mrs. Fred Hiller of Seattle, and Mrs. J. Oken and her daughter, Bessie Oken, also of Seattle. The executives and their husbands were present.

The house was prettily decorated with flowers and to make it more appropriate black cats were placed in various points from which they smiled down upon the guests. A very delectable dinner was served at six o'clock; covers being laid for sixteen, and this was enjoyed by all.

After dinner, entertainment was furnished by Mrs. Kadlec in piano solos and Mrs. Kadlec and Mrs. E. S. Chambers in duets on the piano and by Mrs. Murray singing some of the popular songs.

Lillian B. Murray, Corresponding Secretary.

WORMS

FROM THE HOUSTON CAT CLUB'S ANNUAL

"A wormy cat may have any or all of the following symptoms: variable appetite, distended stomach, film at the corner of the eye, or a harsh coat.

"When illness develops from neglect of either hair balls or worms, or both, prompt worming and ordinary care will often save the cat. Usually, however, people wait to see if the cat won't be better, and after days of inaction call a veterinary, expecting him to work some sort of magic for their cat.

A cat having no indication of worms should be wormed at intervals of six weeks to two months. Skin troubles will not likely yield to treatment if a cat is troubled with worms.

"Take a Dr. Bradley's Submarine and empty contents on a paper For a grown cat take one-third of the Submarine for a three to eight months' kitten one-fourth, and for eight weeks to three months one-fifth. Use a little sugar syrup, and mix the Submarine until it can be dropped into capsules. According to the consistency of the mixture it will fill two or three No 0 capsules for grown cats, and smaller ones for kittens.

"A little patience and practise will soon make that part easy, but be certain that the cat gets the full amount of Submarine. Get the kitten's confidence by petting it a minute, and it's a simple matter to open its mouth and pour the capsule far back on its tongue. Give the Submarine in the morning before the cat has eaten. It will act in thirty minutes; then give a saucer of warm milk. Starving the day before is entirely unnecessary."
